ZIGZAG POLICY OF PRESIDENT IS DENOUNCED

fort above the principles for which their forefathers suffered and died. We of the United States invite disaster, we sacrifice every principle of manhood, if we raise a breed of men in this country who determine vital issues in such fashion. Such men when they face any issue merely ask if it is difficult to meet it honestly and bravely; and if it is, they instantly proceed to meet it dishonestly and timidly. They measure the acts of their public men in terms of immediate material content and ease. They do not require them to act in terms of right and justice. They say that they stand for the administration because it has kept us out of war, and has averted a strike. They refuse seriously to consider, as all high-minded Americans ought to consider, the president's refusal to do his plain and honest duty by meeting great crises honorably and courageously.

Affraid To Stand Firm
President Wilson seeks to justify himself on the ground that it was "futile" and dangerous to "stand firmly." This is an appeal that can with equal truth be made by every soldier who runs away in battle. He further alleges his belief that the cause he championed "has the sanction of the judgment of society in its favor." I remember thirty-odd years ago in the Black Hills a local vigilance committee which was in doubt about hanging a suspected wrongdoer. While they were discussing the matter, there appeared over the neighboring divide a frowzy, elderly horseman in a linen duster, who promptly galloped toward them waving his arms and shouting "Hang him! Hang him!" The leader of the vigilantes at once asked the frowzy stranger what he knew of the facts, whereupon the stranger answered: "I do not know anything about the facts, and I never saw the man before; but there's eleven of you and only one of him, and I believe in majority rule." This is merely a picturesque paraphrase of what Mr. Wilson calls action under "the sanction of society." It exemplifies the principle upon which President Wilson has acted in those public matters, internal and external, where he was threatened with the use of force.

Hughes And Wilson
I appeal to my fellow citizens that they shall elect Mr. Hughes and repudiate Mr. Wilson because only by so doing can they save America from that taint of gross selfishness and cowardice which we owe to Mr. Wilson's substitution of adroit elocution for straightforward action. The permanent interests of the American people lie not in ease and comfort for the moment, no matter how obtained, as Mr. Wilson would teach us; but in resolute championship of the ideas of national and international democratic duty, and in preparedness to make this championship effective by our strength. President Wilson embodies in his person that most dangerous doctrine which teaches our people that when confronted with really formidable responsibilities we can shirk trouble and labor and risk, and avoid duty by the simple process of drugging our souls with the narcotic of meaningless phrase-mongering. Mr. Hughes, to the exact contrary, embodies the ideal of service rendered through conscientious effort in the face of danger and difficulty. Mr. Wilson turns his words into deeds only if this can be achieved by adroit political maneuvering, by bartering a debauched civil service for congressional votes on behalf of some measure which he had solemnly promised to oppose. Our own self-respect demands that we support the man of deeds done in the open against the man of furtive and shifting political maneuvers, the man of service against the man who whenever opposed by a dangerous foe always takes refuge in empty elocution.

There is nothing that we of this country so much need as to practice the doctrine of service. As a people we need the sterner virtues even more than we need the softer virtues. Material prosperity, bodily ease, money, pleasure, are all desirable; but woe to us if we consider them as the be-all and end-all of our private lives or of our collective national life! Woe to us if our material prosperity brings in its wake lethargy of spirit and deadness of soul! Let us in our lives apply the great doctrine of duty and of service. Above all let us realize that lofty professions are a mischievous sham when it is not translated into efficient performance. Among the companions of Lucifer in Milton's mighty epic there was none among the fiercer fiends so dangerous as he who "With words clothed in reason's garb, Counseled ignoble ease and peaceful sloth, Not peace."

STATE PRESS VS. WOVES

Once again those traditional baseball enemies, the State Press and the Woodmen of the World, will come into conflict today. The S. P. has been boasting that the State Press has suffered but one defeat. The lodge men swear that today's clash will break the jinx. The game will start at 9 o'clock this morning, thus giving the Woves all day in which to finish the job.

EASTERN CLUBS HAVE WON PENNANTS SINCE YEAR 1911

(Republican A. P. Leased Wire)

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—The twenty-fifth struggle for world's series baseball honors and the twelfth under the control of the National Baseball Commission, will bring together two eastern clubs, as has been the case each year since 1911. With Boston, winners of the American League pennant, and Brooklyn the victors in the National League race as contenders, the battles for the premier honors of the professional diamond will revive memories of similar contests in which these clubs have figured in the past.

The Boston Americans, since their entry into the junior league in 1901, have won the pennant four times, not including the present season, and have competed for the world's title three times. In 1903 the team captured its first pennant and then defeated the Pittsburgh Nationals in an eight-game series by five games to three. The following year the team repeated its league victory but the New York club, winner of the National League pennant, would not permit its players to contend for the world's championship, which action eventually led to the National Commission taking charge of the world's series. In 1912 and 1915 the Boston Americans again won the right to play in the series and defeated the New York Nationals and the Philadelphia Nationals respectively by scores of four to three, with one tie contest and four games to one.

Although Brooklyn has figured in major league baseball for twenty-six years as against Boston's fifteen, the Superbas have won but three pennants and have never played in a world's series under the modern management.

ing of the term. Brooklyn entered the National League in 1890 and signaled its debut by straightway capturing the flag. At the end of the season the team met the Louisville club, champions of the American Association, in the world's series of those days, and the contest ended in a seven-game tie, each club winning three games with another tied when darkness put an end to the play. In 1899 and 1900 Brooklyn was the National League champion, but as the Temple Cup series had been abandoned and the present series not yet established, the Superbas were unable to find opponents for a titular combat.

While Brooklyn was deprived of the opportunity to compete for the championship in past years the present series offers the club a chance to bring the National League back on an equal footing with the American League in the matter of World's series won. At the present time the record shows that the junior league clubs have won six out of the eleven series played since the national commission assumed control of the baseball classic. The score stands as follows: American League—Philadelphia Athletics 3; Boston Red Sox 2; Chicago White Sox 1; National League—Chicago Cubs 2; New York Giants, Boston Braves and Pittsburg, one each.

The results of the World's series since the first contest between Providence National League winners and the Metropolitan club of the American Association in 1884 and the position of the Boston Americans and the Brooklyn National each season since they entered their respective leagues, are shown in the appended tabulations.

GERMAN PRINCES NOW CONDUCTING OPERATIONS OF TEUTONIC FORCES

The supercommand of the Teutonic armies is gradually being concentrated in the hands of German princes. Prince Leopold of Bavaria succeeds von Hindenburg in the command of the eastern armies. Crown Prince William is in command of the German forces on the northernmost section of the western front, while Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria has been appointed to the "over command of all the German forces on the Somme front."

PEP AND PERSPIRATION AT COYOTE FIELD THESE DAYS

Lots of "pep and perspiration" that's the order of the day at P. H. S. High school's gridiron squad has about doubled in number during the past week, and about the same thing can be said of quality. The P. H. S. football supporters were wearing cheerful countenances yesterday after they watched their stars. Contrary to all the customs of first scrimmages, the defensive play overshadowed the offensive.

The work of Dorris in the back field was one of the features of the day. He is speedy, shifty, and has the beef and uses it effectively. "Butter Milk," commonly known as the "Concrete Kid," appeared stronger than ever before and it seems quite probable that he will be in the firing line a good deal this year. Jimmy Bell looks like he is about to enter upon the best season of his athletic career.

The most pleasant sight of the affair was the number of candidates who appear to be above par in football ability. There will be no lack of substitutes. Moreover, none of the regulars will be able to do any loafing, a fact which Coach Geary more than emphasized. Yesterday it required an expert to tell the varsity from the scrubs. Even Captain Luke had to work like a Trojan to keep up with his youthful position seekers.
